For those who live their Expression, this architect-designed Belgravia home offers a rare blend of personality, pedigree, and design-forward living. Steps from the University of Alberta, the river valley, and the LRT, it's a unique opportunity to own a home where design comes first. Renovated in the 1970s by an architect-owner, the interior was later refined by renowned Canadian designer Meredith Heron, blending mid-century with bold 1980s post-modern confidence. Striking geometry, rich colour, and curated texture will inspire you as you make this home your own. The entire second storey is devoted to the primary suite, a private retreat with treetop views. Outside, the home sits on a quiet tree-lined street with mature landscaping and excellent walkability to cafes, parks, and trail networks. If you're seeking a home that embraces personality and refuses predictability, this architectural Belgravia gem awaits. (id:6769)
