Some homes are simply built. Others are composed. Architecture, light and landscape come together in a way that's impossible to recreate in this extraordinary mid-century modern bungalow nestled on the hillside of Laurier Heights. Every space has been thoughtfully designed to draw the outdoors in, from soaring cedar ceilings and exposed beams to walls of glass framing the surrounding gardens and treetops. The result is a home that feels remarkably peaceful, private and connected to nature in every season. Offering over 2,100 sqft above grade with five bedrooms and 2.5 bathrooms, the flowing layout balances entertaining spaces with warm, intimate rooms. Set on an expansive 1,216 m² hillside lot, the grounds become an extension of the home itself, creating countless places to gather, unwind or simply enjoy the quiet beauty of the setting. Carefully preserved and true to its original design, this is more than a beautiful home; it's a rare opportunity to own a meaningful piece of Edmonton architecture. (id:6769)
